How We Help Your Clients

We Make Plan Administration Easy

Administering a retirement plan can be challenging and time-consuming for many businesses. Many companies struggle to keep up with their legal responsibilities as fiduciaries. In fact, some of your clients may not fully understand all the aspects of these responsibilities.

As an administrative service provider to your clients' retirement plans, The Retirement Advantage, Inc. (TRA) is uniquely positioned to assist them. Through our 3(16) Fiduciary Services program, your clients can transfer some of their fiduciary responsibilities to us.

Your clients can also outsource select administrative functions to TRA, relieving them of many of the day-to-day duties associated with sponsoring a plan.

Fiduciary Basics

Before we take a closer look at TRA's services, let's briefly review fiduciary responsibilities that are important for your clients to understand.

What Is a Fiduciary?

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) set the standards of conduct for those who manage a retirement plan and its assets. A person or entity that manages a plan and its assets is called a fiduciary.

A fiduciary must abide by these standards of conduct:

- Act solely in the interest of plan participants and beneficiaries
- Act with care, skill, prudence and diligence
- Diversify the investments of the plan
- Administer the plan in accordance with the plan documents and instruments
- Evaluate the reasonableness of fees and charges paid by the plan

Every retirement plan must have at least one named fiduciary. For most plans, the business owner or plan sponsor serves that role and is always considered a fiduciary — even if a plan document names other fiduciaries or if the plan sponsor hires others to assist them with their responsibilities.

Are There Different Types of Fiduciaries?

There are three different types of fiduciary responsibilities: 3(21), 3(38) and 3(16).

A 3(21) fiduciary includes anyone who manages plan assets or provides investment advice for a fee. A 3(38) fiduciary has full discretion over and assumes fiduciary liability for a plan's investments. As a plan advisor, you are likely familiar with both of these fiduciary roles.

In contrast, a 3(16) fiduciary's role focuses on a plan's administrative functions; for example, reporting and disclosure requirements. With our 3(16) fiduciary services, your clients designate most or all of these responsibilities to be performed by TRA.

We Make It Easy To Manage 3(16) Responsibilities

How We Help You

Our plan administration services benefit you, as well. As a plan advisor, you are responsible for selecting and monitoring appropriate plan investments, conducting enrollments and maximizing participation. You may also be involved with the programs designed to ensure the savings health for each of your clients and their employees.

That's a lot — and you don't need any distractions from these key roles, which can happen when your clients are assuming all their 3(16) fiduciary responsibilities and look to you for help. When your clients participate in our fiduciary services, TRA takes this burden off your shoulders. You also enhance your role as a trusted plan advisor who:

- Focuses on your clients' needs to simplify and streamline administrative burdens.
- Offers a proven solution to help manage fiduciary risk.

Why Your Clients Should Choose TRA

When your clients enroll in our 3(16) fiduciary services, they (and you) can be confident that they are working with one of the industry's leading providers.

Your clients can be sure that their plans are adopting mandated requirements, meeting deadlines and are staying in compliance. And, at the same time, they — and their employees — will have more time to concentrate on their business.

At TRA, we:

- Perform data checks regularly to ensure accuracy
- Provide the highest level of client service
- Integrate with leading payroll providers

Managing Fiduciary Responsibilities
